

FOOD ACCESS CONCERNS

North Park University supports any student who has concerns accessing enough food every day. If you aren't sure where your next meal will come from, please tell a professor, your resident assistant (RA) or resident director (RD), or the University Nurse (email healthservices@northpark.edu).

Remember: If you live in the residence halls, you always get 2 free meals each week.

There are food pantries close to campus where you can get for free groceries (see list below)

- Make sure you live in the food pantry's service area (see information below)
- You will be asked to show where you live so remember to bring a piece of mail addressed to you or driver's license with a Chicago address
- Note the days and hours the food pantry is open (see information below)
- You can usually get groceries at these food pantries once a month, but always ask the particular pantry so you know how often you can come for groceries
